

“Blitz” Cleaning for Serious Jobs

Gregory Heath was born into the cleaning industry. His father was a building service contractor, and Gregory worked with him from the age of 16.

Now, 20 years later, Heath has his own contract cleaning company but with a bit of a twist: his company “blitzcleans” troubled facilities that need major cleaning and restoration—quickly.

For example, his firm, Midwest Environmental Services Group, Inc.,

Chicago, IL, cleans, restores, and deodorizes restrooms in some of the city’s neediest public schools. “They call us when things get really bad, and one of the biggest problems we encounter is odor problems,” says Heath. “In fact, it’s not uncommon to smell these restrooms as soon as we walk in the school door.”

Because his company must make improvements very quickly and still charge competitive rates, Heath needed a cleaning system that does the job fast with as few workers as possible. “All of the traditional cleaning systems we evaluated were slow and labor-intensive. The only one that could do the job thoroughly, quickly, and effectively is the No-Touch Cleaning™ system from Kaivac, Inc.,” he says.

The KaiVac® eliminates dirty mops, which Heath says are among the major causes of odors in restrooms. “Also, with the KaiVac, we can spray down walls, ceilings, partitions, and fixtures, literally blasting away dirt and grime—and odors.”

Heath adds that they also use the KaiVac to clean cafeterias, hallways, desks, and chairs. “We have seen fungus living on school chairs,” he says. “It’s disgusting, but it’s all gone because of the KaiVac. I have to say, my customers really appreciate our quick, blitzcleaning turnaround, and we love our KaiVac.”
